

Evaluating Your eProof

If you wish to make changes to your metadata, click on the See More Details link in the Title Approval page. You'll then be able to edit and save changes to each section of metadata as needed.

Your eproof file contains the following:

- Evaluating your eProof information page
- eProof hairlines information page
- Full dustjacket image (if applicable)
- Full cover image
- Cropped front cover image (this does not appear in the printed book)
- Interior content (multiple pages, in reader order), first page to be on the right-hand side (or left-hand for RTL books*)
- Cropped back cover image (this does not appear in the printed book)

Recommended items to consider while evaluating your eProof:

- Have your latest changes been incorporated?
- Is the pagination correct?
- Odd numbered pages on the right/recto and even numbers on the left/verso?
- RTL books*: odd numbered pages to the left/verso and even numbers on the right/recto?
- Are the page items and text positioned correctly on the page?
- Does your proof contain any spelling or grammatical errors or typos that need to be corrected?
- Is the ISBN correct and identical on the cover as well as the copyright page?
- Does the price on the cover match the price in the title metadata?

Other considerations:

- eProofs should not be used to evaluate color or print quality. A physical copy should be reviewed to evaluate this.
- The cropping of both cover and interior is approximate and does not account for the manufacturing variance of 1/16" (2mm)
- eProof file sizes are limited. Where a file is close to its limit, pages are removed from the middle of the content to reduce the file size. Where this happens, you will see a watermark appear at the bottom of each interior page confirming that pages have been removed. Note: this only appears in the eProof file and does not apply when the book is printed

Important note:

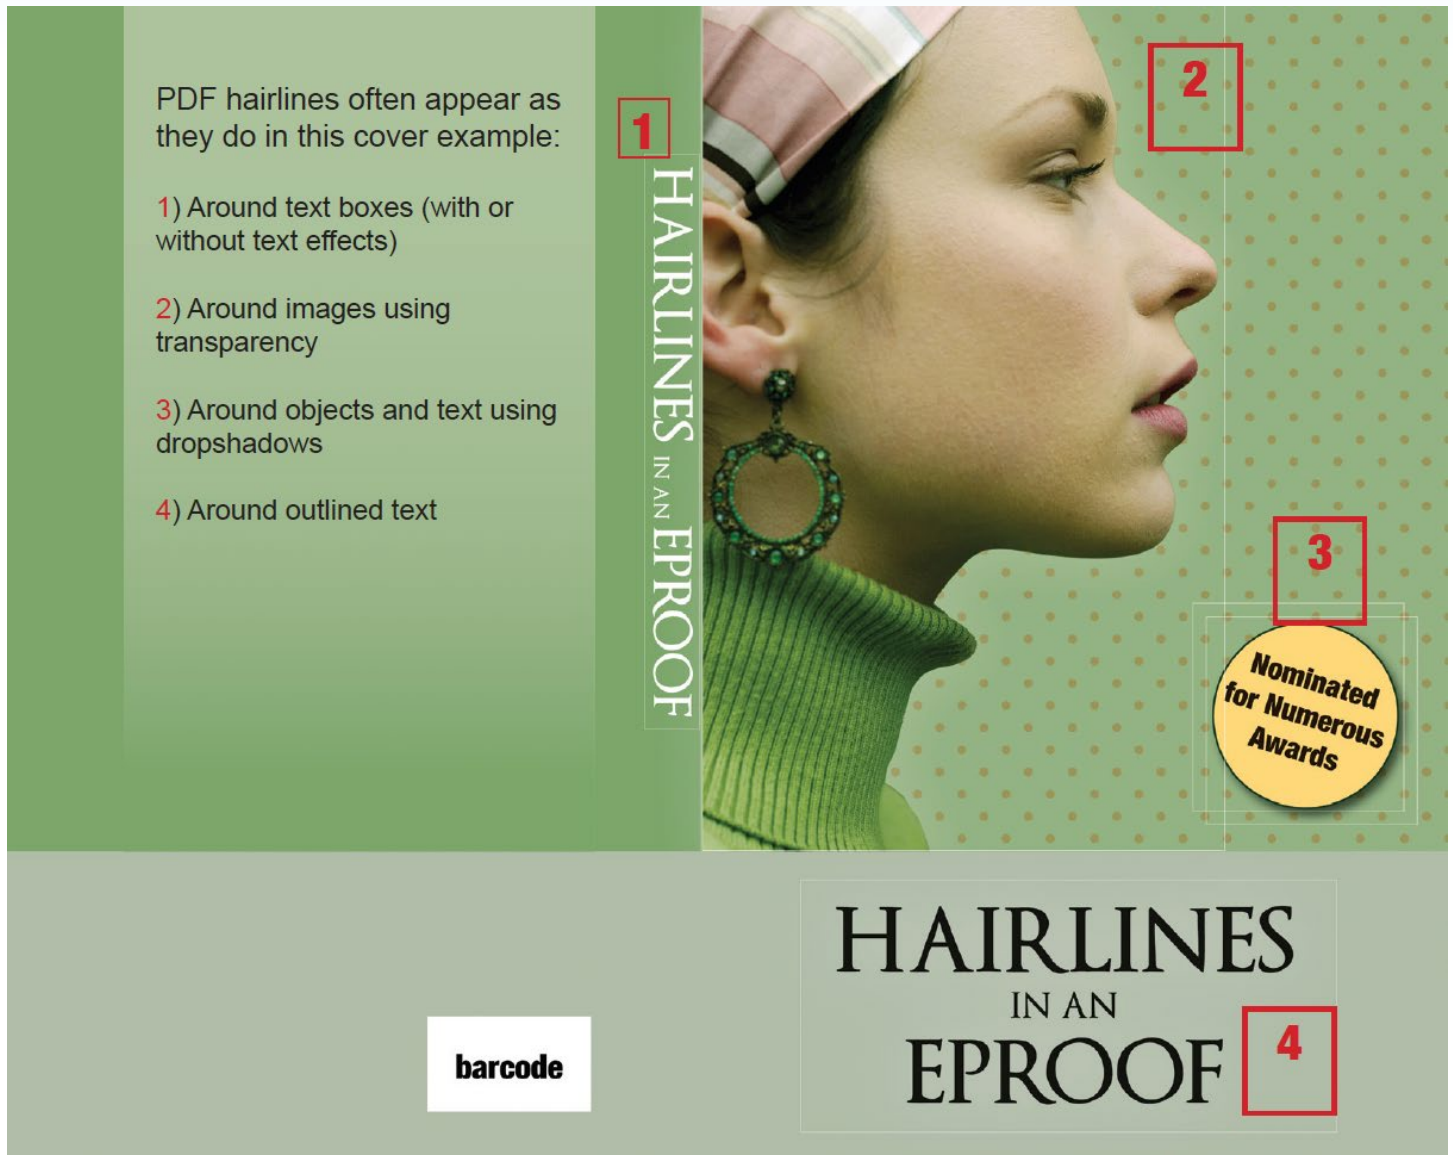

- !! Pending production orders cannot be released for printing until your proof approval is completed.
- !! It is the publisher's responsibility to review each eProof to confirm it is accurate and does not contain errors. Lightning Source is not a publisher and as such does not review any content for accuracy, completeness or typographical errors of any kind will print the file as approved by the publisher.

Eproof Approval PDFs

When reviewing eproofs and PDFs, you will often see hairlines. These thin, light colored lines are a result of a transparency flattener used by PDF creators and will sometimes appear around text boxes and masked images. Fortunately these hairlines are only visible in your PDF and will not print when the book is produced. These lines may appear on both cover and interior files.

Please note That while the above examples are most common, hairlines may also present themselves in additional ways. If you have any concerns, it's advisable to review your native working files to ensure the lines aren't present. Physical proofs are also available for review.

The Rockefeller Christmas Tree

The Little Tree with Big Dreams

Deep in the hidden forest,
beyond the grumpy Oak trees,
chubby chipmunks and squirrels
were busy gathering nuts
to prepare for the long winter ahead.

Reindeer practiced jumping over snowdrifts, dreaming of pulling Santa's sleigh this year.

The forest buzzed with excitement because it was time to choose the Rockefeller Christmas Tree- And little Rocky couldn't wait!

Rocky wasn't the biggest or the strongest.
He was quite the opposite.

Rocky was a Norway Spruce, but unlike the other spruces, his branches were bare and bent in funny directions, and his needles were almost never green. Still, he longed to be the Rockefeller Christmas Tree.

The animals teased Rocky for his unbelievable impossible dream.

AJ, the squirrel, circled Rocky and sang,
"You're limp and bare;
you'll never be
the Rockefeller Christmas Tree!"

As she combed her hair
and admired her reflection in her mirror,
Mrs. Pickles, the skunk, said,
"What makes you think you can be the grandest tree for all the world to see?"

Rocky lifted his branches and lowered his top as the skunk walked away.
Tears trickled down his twisted branches.

That night, Rocky nodded off to sleep, away from the other animals, as marshmallow-sized snowflakes began to fall.

The tallest tree appeared, and high in the branches sat AJ the squirrel.

In a booming voice, the tree asked,
"I heard you're going to enter the Rockefeller Christmas Tree contest?"
"Uh... yes," Rocky replied, his voice trembling.
"Who are you?" he asked, looking up at the huge tree.
"The name is Spruce, Bruce Spruce," the burly tree said as he tipped his top and held out his branches.

"Between you and me, you don't stand a chance. You're sure to lose—not that I have anything to worry about, judging by the looks of you."

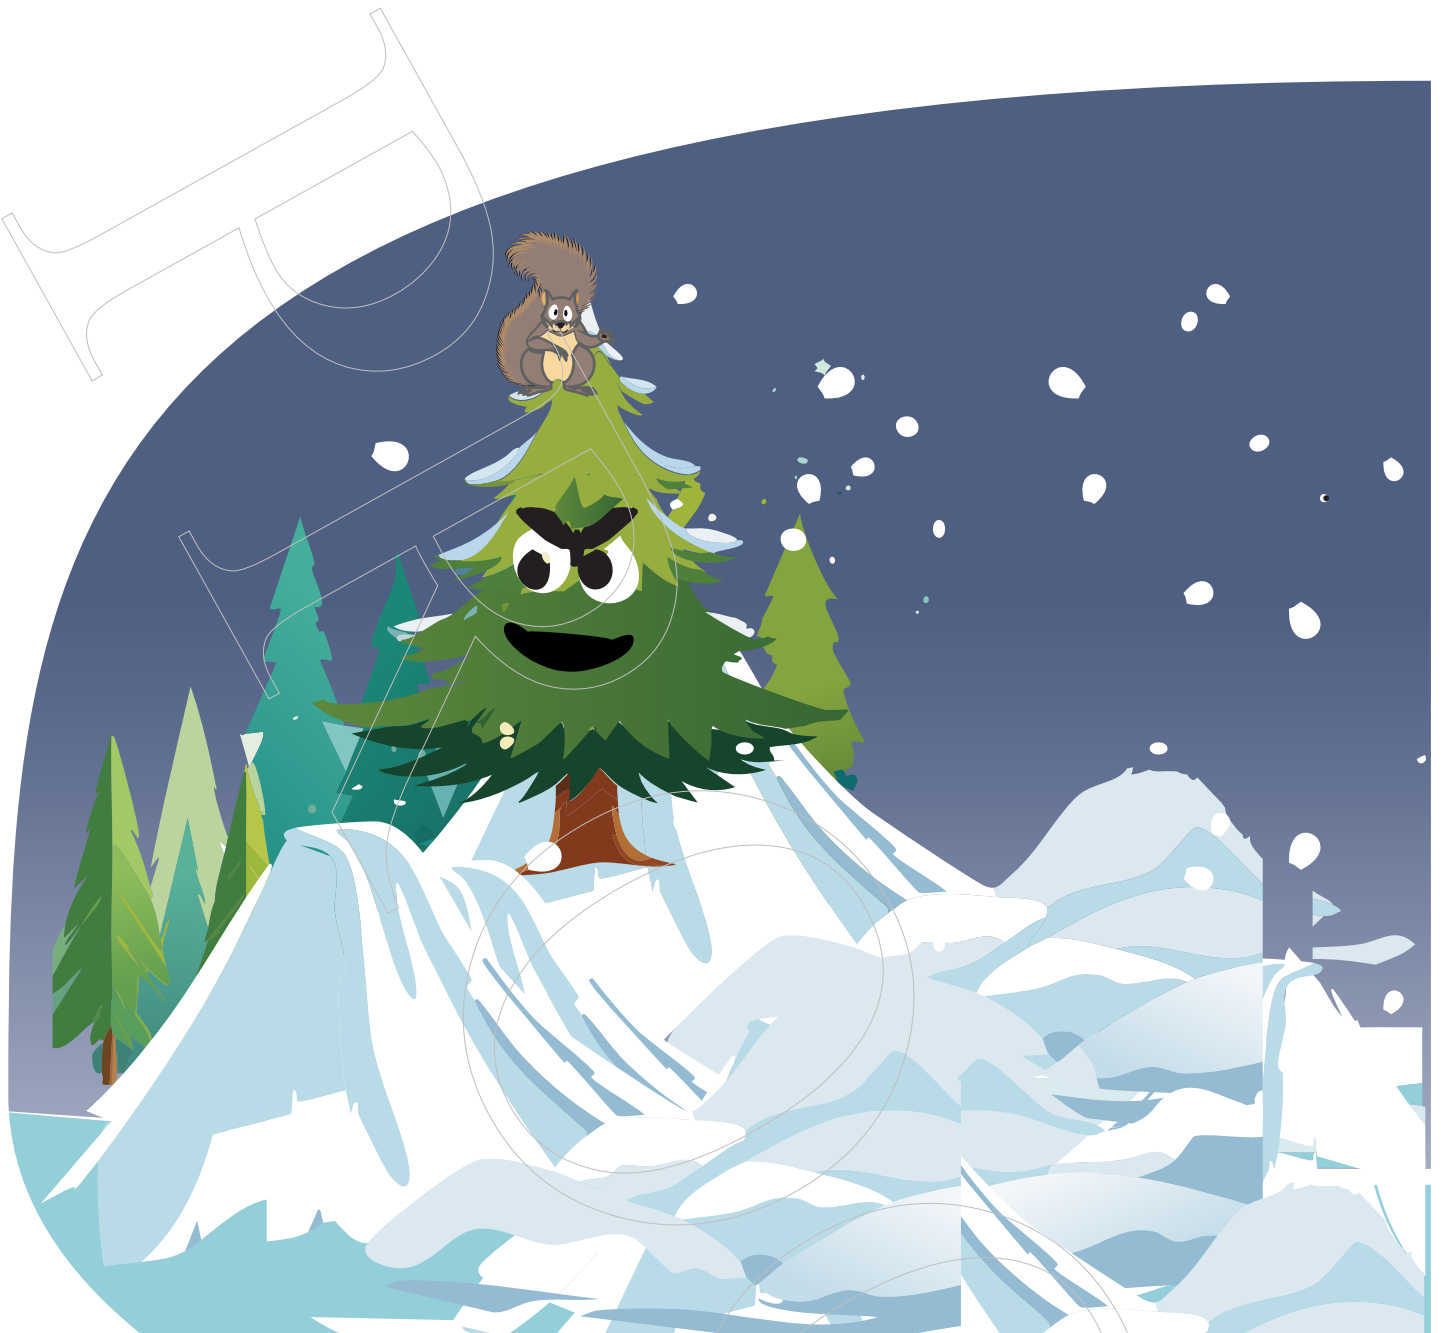

"Yeah, Rocky, withdraw your name," AJ added, trying to mimic Bruce's bossy tone with his squeaky, squirrely voice.

"You don't scare me!" Rocky said.

"Leave Rocky alone, Bruce," a wee voice said from behind Rocky. Rocky turned to see a little fairy hovering in front of Bruce's face. She shook her finger at Bruce in the most serious way a delicate wood fairy could.

"Remember what I said, Rocky," Bruce Spruce called out as he and AJ departed, laughing. The fairy turned her attention to Rocky.

"Hello! I'm MaryLouise, the Guardian of the Forest," she said, buzzing around Rocky with a gentle smile.

"Bruce and AJ—they're full of hot air," the fairy said, dancing playfully around Rocky, trying to make him smile.

"Are you an enchanted fairy? Will you make me handsome and strong like Bruce Spruce and the mighty White Pine?" Rocky asked hopefully.

"There is no such thing as magic. You just have to believe."

"Goodbye for now!" Mary Louise said with a wink before fluttering away.

Just as quickly as the fairy appeared, she was gone.

"Believe? That's what I'll do! I'll drink lots of water, and I'll grow tall and green!" Rocky said, ready to try his best.

"Look at me!" Rocky yelled, his words echoing through the forest. The more Rocky believed in himself, the more he felt his confidence grow. Soon, he started to look just like he imagined.

The little tree imagined it had big, strong branches.
Every day, it would tell itself,
"I am tall, fluffy, and green!"

As if by magic, things began to happen. The more Rocky believed, the more he became what he imagined. His branches unfolded into lush, dark green leaves, and he grew to twice his size. Rocky swayed proudly, gleaming with joy.

However, his newfound confidence made the animals curious and suspicious. Mrs. Pickles and AJ huddled together in the forest, whispering in quiet voices.

"Have you seen Rocky? He's changed," Mrs. Pickles said, her eye wide with concern.

"His branches reach the sky," AJ replied. "It must be magic."

"Yes," said Mrs. Pickles. "The Guardian of the Forest must have cast a spell on him!"

"I'd better tell Bruce!"

By now, it was time for the contest.

The trees practiced standing tall, all except...
Bruce Spruce. He and AJ hid at the edge of the forest, staying in the shadows, watching Rocky. Bruce spoke in his deep, mighty voice,

"You may be right, AJ... it's magic."

"You're going to lose now, huh, Bruce?" squeaked AJ.

"Bah! We must find a way to catch the fairy and make her change Rocky back," Bruce grumbled.
"How will we do that?" AJ asked, his voice trembling with worry.

"We'll set a trap!" Bruce said,
his eyes bright with a big idea.

The sneaky duo came up with a plan to trap Mary Louise. Her tiny home of pebbles and dried leaves was tucked away in the forest, where Mary Louise made special ornaments for the contest champion.

Bruce gathered twigs and made a net to catch the fairy.

As soon as Mary Louise went to get more supplies for her ornaments, AJ shouted, “Quick, Bruce! Get your net!”

The big tree swung his net just as Mary Louise turned around. Whoosh!
The net dropped over her.

“We caught you!” AJ cheered.

“You used magic on Rocky! Change him back, or when I get back, I’m knocking down your house!”

“Magic?” Mary Louise giggled.

“Oh, I didn’t do anything like that!”

AJ kept Mary Louise tucked behind a big snow mound while Bruce went off to join the competition.

“There’s no spell!” Mary Louise said with a smile.

“I just told Rocky to believe in himself, and he could do anything!”

“That’s it?” AJ asked, eyes wide.

“Yes,” Mary Louise said with a grin.

“Now, please put me down.”

AJ let Mary Louise go, just in time to see all the trees being judged.

The judges flew overhead in helicopters, looking for the perfect tree. Each tree stood tall and proud as the judges admired them from above. But one tree stood out from all the rest. The tree they were looking at was Rocky!

“We found the perfect tree!” The judges shouted.

Rocky's branches were decorated with red ornaments and twinkling lights. Thousands gathered around—even Bruce Spruce, AJ, and Mrs. Pickles, who was still admiring herself in her mirror, barely noticing the amazing scene before her. Mary Louise buzzed around Rocky one last time, her wings sparkling like the lights on his branches.

“Always remember: If you believe without a doubt and don’t give up, you can do anything your heart desires!”
Mary Louise gave Rocky a wink and fluttered her wings.

“See you at the North Pole with all the Rockefeller Christmas Trees from years gone by!”
Rocky tipped his top, careful not to drop his star,
and raised a branch to wave goodbye.
It was Rocky’s happiest day ever!
